

Why Workforce Wellbeing?

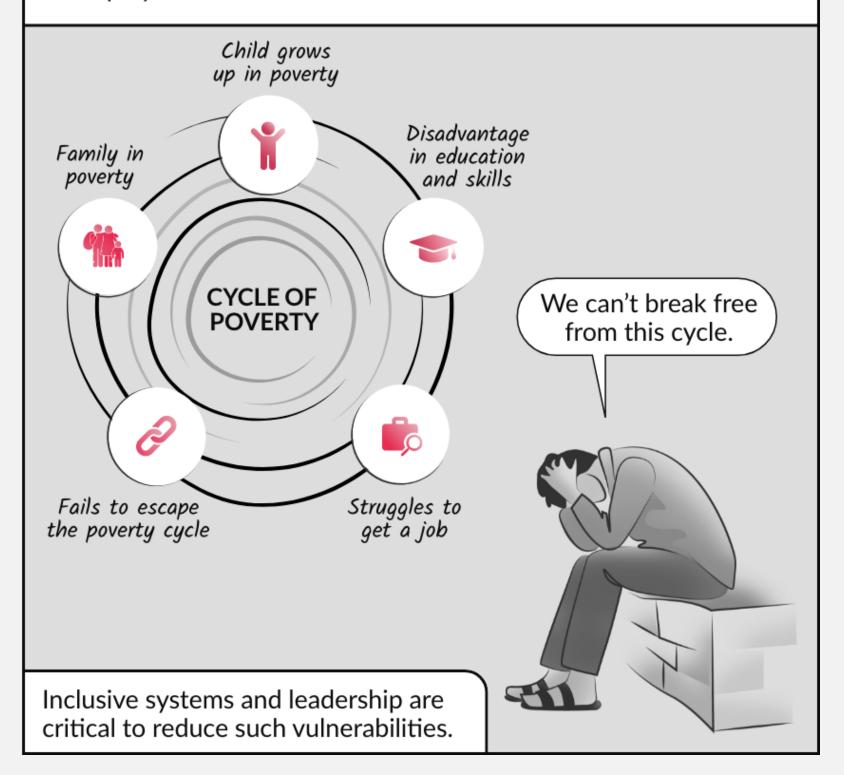

Migrants face exclusion and poverty, with little support and inadequate infrastructure.

It's hard to survive without resources or proper policies.

Without inclusive systems and leadership, they remain vulnerable.

In a volatile, uncertain and complex world, the workforce, especially migrant workforce often gets caught in loop of poverty, unemployment and unsafe conditions.

Research shows that investing in wellbeing fosters economic growth. It's time we see this as an investment, not a cost.

Investing in workforce wellbeing isn't just the right thing to do, it's good for business.

$10 trillion in benefits could be unlocked by 2035.*

Supportive environments reduce absenteeism and improve loyalty.

I used to take 45 late days per month, now it's down to 17!

Women's earnings are rising, closing the gap with men's. I'm finally earning 84 cents for every dollar my male colleagues make!

Inclusive teams boost performance by up to 30% in diverse environments.

A well-supported workforce creates resilient communities, capable of withstanding economic and environmental shifts.

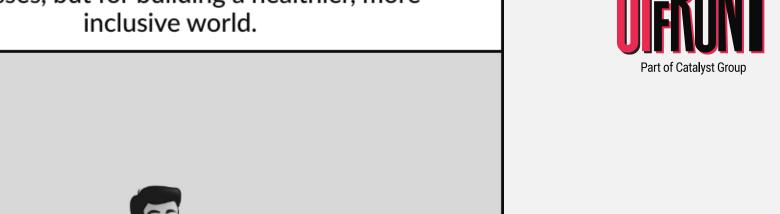

Green jobs and eco-friendly practices can lead to better environmental outcomes for industries and communities.

Workforce wellbeing is not just a necessity for businesses, but for building a healthier, more

Let's invest in our workforce—for a better tomorrow!

